PART A — QUESTIONS

TSIA2-E10-001

Section: ELAR

Type: mcq

Focus: Reading

Prompt:

Read the passage and answer the question.

The nursing simulation lab at Prairie Bend College was designed to look like a small hospital unit, complete with adjustable beds, monitors, supply carts, and computerized patient mannequins. At first, some students thought the mannequins made the exercises feel artificial. Instructors explained that the purpose of the lab was not to replace real clinical experience but to give students a place to practice before working with actual patients. During one simulation, a mannequin's breathing rate changed, and students had to decide which information to report first. In another, students practiced speaking calmly to a "family member" played by an instructor. After each session, the class discussed what went well and what should be improved. These conversations were as important as the technical skills because they helped students connect actions with reasoning. By making mistakes in a controlled setting, students learned to slow down, communicate clearly, and explain the choices behind their care.

Which statement best expresses the central idea of the passage?

- A) Nursing simulation labs can help students practice clinical skills and decision-making in a safe setting.
- B) Computerized mannequins should replace all real clinical experiences for nursing students.
- C) Nursing students learn best when they avoid discussing mistakes after practice.
- D) Simulation labs are useful only for students who already have hospital experience.

Prompt:

Read the passage and answer the question.

The county clerk's office revised its voter registration instructions after staff noticed that many residents left the apartment-number field blank. The old instructions simply said "address." The new version says, "Street address, apartment or unit number if any, city, state, and ZIP code." Staff also added a sample entry on the back of the form. The change reduced the number of applications returned for missing information.

What is the main purpose of the revised instructions?

- A) To help residents provide complete address information
- B) To make residents submit applications in person
- C) To remove the apartment-number field from the form
- D) To prevent staff from reviewing applications

Read the passage and answer the question.

Sofia believed that preparing for a speech meant memorizing every sentence. During practice, however, she froze whenever she forgot one word. Her instructor suggested that she memorize only the main points and practice explaining them in different ways. At first, Sofia worried that this would make her speech less polished. Instead, she sounded more natural and recovered more easily when interrupted by a question.

What can reasonably be inferred about Sofia?

- A) She learns that understanding main ideas can be more useful than memorizing exact wording.
- B) She decides that speeches should never be practiced before class.
- C) She discovers that answering questions always makes a speech worse.
- D) She believes polished speaking requires avoiding main points.

Read the passage and answer the question.

A neighborhood committee wants to install public benches along a long walking route to the grocery store. Supporters say benches would help older residents, parents with small children, and people carrying heavy bags rest along the way. Some residents worry that benches could attract litter or block narrow sidewalks. The committee is considering locations with wider pavement and a maintenance plan with nearby volunteers.

Which statement best describes the committee's approach?

- A) It is considering the usefulness of benches while addressing concerns about placement and upkeep.
- B) It has decided to remove all sidewalks near the grocery store.
- C) It believes benches should be installed without considering pedestrian movement.
- D) It wants to discourage residents from walking to the grocery store.

Prompt:

Read the passage and answer the question.

In an economics lesson, the instructor compares a household budget to a map. A map does not force travelers to choose one destination, but it helps them see possible routes, distances, and obstacles. Similarly, a budget does not decide a person's priorities, but it can reveal whether spending habits match those priorities. The comparison helps students understand budgeting as a planning tool rather than a punishment.

What is the main purpose of the map comparison?

- A) To show that a budget can help people make informed choices without deciding their goals for them
- B) To prove that all travelers should use paper maps instead of phone apps
- C) To argue that budgets prevent people from spending money on anything enjoyable
- D) To explain why economics classes should focus only on transportation

Prompt:

Read the two passages and answer the question.

Passage 1:

Schools should provide students with printed planners at the beginning of the year. A planner gives students one place to record assignments, deadlines, and activities. Writing tasks down by hand can make responsibilities feel more concrete.

Passage 2:

Printed planners can help some students, but schools should not assume one system works for everyone. Some students manage assignments better with phone calendars, reminder apps, or online learning platforms. The important goal is helping students choose a reliable system they will actually use.

How does Passage 2 respond to Passage 1?

- A) Passage 2 agrees that planning matters but argues that students may need different tools.
- B) Passage 2 claims that students should not record assignments or deadlines.

- C) Passage 2 argues that printed planners are the only reliable method for organizing work.
D) Passage 2 says that online learning platforms should never include due dates.

The article about public fountains explains that they once served a practical purpose by providing drinking water for people and animals in crowded towns. Today, many fountains are decorative, but the author argues that they still create gathering places. People meet near them, rest beside them, and use them as landmarks when giving directions. The author's point is that a feature can lose one function while gaining or keeping another.

Which statement best summarizes the passage?

- A) Public fountains may no longer serve the same practical function, but they can still shape public space.
B) Public fountains should be removed because people no longer depend on them for drinking water.
C) Decorative fountains are useful only when animals can drink from them.
D) Town landmarks are unnecessary when people have written addresses.

The short story describes an old bicycle repair shop where the owner keeps a row of worn tires hanging from the ceiling. The narrator says the tires "circled above the room like stories waiting to be ridden again." The image suggests that the shop is not only a place for fixing machines but also a place where past journeys are remembered and made possible again.

What effect does the quoted image most likely create?

- A) It gives the repair shop a sense of memory and renewed possibility.
B) It shows that the tires are dangerous because they may fall.
C) It suggests that the owner refuses to repair bicycles.
D) It makes the shop seem empty and unused.

Read the passage and answer the question.

A math instructor tells students to show their work even when they can solve a problem mentally. Written steps help instructors identify where an error occurred, but they also help students check their own reasoning. A final answer alone may show whether a student was right or wrong; the steps show how the student was thinking.

Which sentence best states the instructor's point?

- A) Showing work helps reveal and check the reasoning behind an answer.
- B) Students should avoid mental math in every situation.
- C) A final answer is always more important than the process used to find it.
- D) Written steps are useful only when the answer is incorrect.

The training guide for delivery drivers instructs them to photograph packages only after placing them fully inside the customer's porch area. A photo taken from the sidewalk may prove that the driver reached the address, but it may not show whether the package was left in a safe location. The guide emphasizes that the photograph should document both delivery and placement.

Why does the guide require a photograph after the package is placed?

- A) To show that the package was delivered and left in an appropriate location
- B) To encourage drivers to photograph every house on the street
- C) To replace the need for customers to order packages online
- D) To prove that sidewalks are safer than porches

The article on reusable food containers notes that they can reduce single-use packaging when people use them regularly. However, the author also explains that buying more containers than needed can create unnecessary clutter and waste. The most sustainable choice, the article argues, is not simply owning reusable items but using a manageable number of them consistently.

Which statement best describes the author's reasoning?

- A) Reusable containers are most beneficial when they are used regularly and not purchased in excess.
- B) Reusable containers are harmful in every situation.
- C) Single-use packaging is always more sustainable than reusable containers.
- D) People should buy as many reusable containers as possible regardless of need.

When Emilio began working at a small print shop, he thought customer service meant agreeing to every request. One afternoon, a customer asked whether a large banner could be printed in twenty minutes. Emilio almost said yes, but his coworker explained that the ink needed time to dry before the banner could be rolled safely. Emilio learned to offer an honest timeline and suggest alternatives instead of making a promise the shop could not keep.

What lesson does Emilio learn?

- A) Good service sometimes requires setting realistic expectations.
- B) Customers should never be offered alternative solutions.
- C) Print shops should accept only small orders.
- D) Fast promises are always better than accurate information.

TSIA2-ES10-001

Section: Essay

Type: essay

Prompt:

Some people believe that students should be taught how to use public services such as libraries, transit systems, health clinics, and local government offices. They argue that knowing how to access these services can help students become more independent adults. Others believe that schools and colleges should focus on academic subjects and that students can learn about public services when they need them.

Assignment:

Write an essay of 300–600 words in which you develop your point of view on the issue presented in the passage. Support your position with reasoning and examples from your reading, studies, experience, or observations.

Model Guidance:

A strong response should clearly state a position on whether schools and colleges should teach students how to use public services. The essay should maintain focus, organize ideas logically, and support the position with specific reasons and examples. Strong responses may consider the value of practical civic knowledge, the limits of school time, and the importance of independence. The writing should use varied sentence structure, demonstrate control of Standard English conventions, and show thoughtful reasoning.

Rubric:

Score 8: The essay presents a clear, insightful position; develops ideas thoroughly with specific and persuasive examples; is logically organized; uses precise language and varied sentence structure; and shows strong control of Standard English conventions.

Score 7: The essay presents a clear position; develops ideas effectively with relevant support; is well organized; uses appropriate language; and contains only minor errors.

Score 6: The essay presents a reasonable position; develops ideas adequately; has a clear structure; shows general language control; and may include some errors that do not interfere with meaning.

Score 5: The essay presents a position but may support it unevenly; organization is present but basic; language control is adequate; and errors may occasionally distract the reader.

Score 4: The essay shows a limited or unclear position; development is thin, general, or repetitive; organization may be weak; and errors may interfere with meaning.

Score 3: The essay attempts to address the issue but has minimal support, weak organization, and frequent language errors.

Score 2: The essay is seriously underdeveloped, poorly organized, or difficult to understand because of major errors.

Score 1: The essay shows little ability to develop a response and may be extremely brief, confusing, or mostly unrelated.

Score 0: blank, off-topic, too short, incoherent, or non-English response

PART B — ANSWER KEY + EXPLANATIONS

TSIA2-E10-001 — Correct: A — Correct Answer: Nursing simulation labs can help students practice clinical skills and decision-making in a safe setting. — Explanation: The passage explains that the lab lets students practice technical actions, communication, and reasoning before working with real patients.
